

Open Pairs

In the continuing exploration of my earthenware vessels, the forms have opened up creating linear relationships. They are less concerned with containment than the movement. I have stopped using the base resulting in flexible configurations. In the past the base has controlled the relationship between the elements; in the new pieces I have let go of that format and with it my conception of a single way the piece should be.